I understand that [redacted] gave you the $1,500 estimate which was an average to include appointee travel cost. However, he based his estimate of appointee travel costs on the amounts obligated--which are usually excessive--rather than amounts actually expended.

Our best estimate on processing costs is:

$700 per EOD who does not get appointee travel

$1,131 per EOD who does get appointee travel.

This estimate includes:

Recruitment and pre-employment processing	$214
Invitee travel	150
Security investigation	212
Medical examination	49
Testing	21
Appointee travel	431

The real average is probably higher for professional, JOT, and Commo types than for clericals whether they get appointee travel or not. The reason for this is that the clericals do not get invitee travel.

I think the old material is now out dated - one Br. has more recent drafts. Let's just add this to the survey file.
